Oil exec warns unleaded shortage to get 'worse'

By EDGAR PEREZ

Nationwide shortages of unleaded gasoline "may get worse before they get better," warned the president of one of the country's major oil companies in an address before the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce Friday night. Hancock County native James E.

Lee, president of Gulf Oil Corporation, attributed the impending motor fuel crisis primarily to an "excess of government regulation."

In addition, Lee delivered a blistering attack on the federal government's deficit spending policies as the "fundamental cause of inflation."

"To a large extent, the problems we are experiencing with increases in the prices of goods and services are the result of inflation, rather than the cause," the corporate leader explained.

"Until all of us, the people and the government, recognize and crack down on this basic cause of inflation—Federal spending—we are not going to solve the problem," Lee feels.

In a third jab at government policies, this time on the Administration's long-term approach to the energy supply, Lee again barked at government price regulations in the oil industry.

"We at Gulf and in the oil industry believe a simple and workable solution to the problem of bringing U.S. prices to the world level... would be for the President himself to nudge crude prices toward world market levels... by Sept. 30, 1981 when price control authority is scheduled to expire," Lee suggested.

"We estimate that with such incremental oil-price decontrol, the average price of all petroleum products excluding inflation would rise over a three-year period at a rate of roughly two cents per gallon per year," the speaker explained.

Lee said that total of six cents, federal, state and local governments, along with royalty owners, would receive about four cents and the oil companies two cents.

"And many economists believe that, in the long run, the net effect of gradual removal of domestic petroleum price controls would be anti-inflationary since the economy in general would be strengthened," he added.

On the more immediate unleaded gasoline shortage, Lee noted the oil industry "started this year with the highest inventory of gasoline supplies in history, but ended with the lowest supply since 1975."

He was sharply critical again of price controls, which he maintains are rendering the oil companies "unable to earn a return sufficient enough to add refineries fast enough to keep pace with demand."

He also cited environmentalists and a SHORTAGE-Page 4

Waveland mayor balks at meeting procedure

By LESLIE WILLIAMS

Hancock County Supervisors' and Waveland Mayor John Longo Jr.'s votes against a resolution seeking establishment of a regional wastewater treatment commission were not enough to prevent a narrow majority of Gulf Coast officials from approving the proposal Wednesday.

Creation of the commission will be the first step in implementing a proposed $100 million wastewater treatment system for the Gulf Coast.

Of 29 officials present at the Biloxi Hilton representing Hancock, Harrison, and Stone Counties, 15 voted in favor of asking state legislators to create the 12 member commission.

"The election wasn't fair," exclaimed Longo. "I voted against the resolution, and so did the supervisors."

"I didn't know they were going to vote on any issues at the meeting," continued Longo.

Longo said he was told there would only be a discussion of the 201-200 Gulf Coast Area-Wide Wastewater Management Plan in Biloxi.

"The election wasn't fair," reiterated the mayor. "I'm not going to vote on a resolution without first checking with the board of aldermen and my constituents."

Longo said when an election is going to be conducted at a meeting, previous notice should be given to those at tending so they can research the issue and ask constituents how they feel about the issue.

Longo said during the meeting he stood up and asked, "Does anyone here know how much the total plan is going to cost the people?"

"No one had an answer to my question," he added.

Garden Club Pilgrimage set March 24

By LESLIE WILLIAMS

Nine homes in Bay St. Louis and Waveland will be displayed March 28 in the annual Spring Pilgrimage of the Mississippi Gulf Coast Council of Garden Clubs.

Tour of the homes will begin at 10 a.m. and finish at 5 p.m.

The Bay-Waveland center at 114 Leonhard Ave. in Bay St. Louis will be starting point for the Bay-Waveland Pilgrimage, where coffee and doughnuts will be served along with information and maps about the remainder of the tour.

The tour will then proceed to home of Ms. Joe Pilet, on 420 Highland Drive, Bay St. Louis.

Ms. Pilet's half acre garden features azaleas and many old trees.

View of the Pilet's garden will be followed by a look at the Presbyterian Manse on 114 Ulman Avenue, Bay St. Louis.

The minister's home formerly belonged to Lotta and Steele Drake. Steele Drake was the first civil engineer surveyor of Hancock County. The home was built about 1898.

Next on the agenda will be the home of Mr. and Mrs. Michael D. Haas on 712 South Beach Blvd., Bay St. Louis.

This home was originally part of a Spanish land grant to Phillip Saucier, on August 27, 1781. The home is believed to have been constructed in 1850 by John and Louisa Petit, who bought the property in 1849. There are 14-foot ceilings and large airy rooms opening on to the front veranda, all part of the original design.

A luncheon break at 11:30 a.m. at the Bay-Waveland Yacht Club will follow the tour of the minister's home.

The cost will be $4.50 per person. Prepaid reservations are necessary. Those wishing to attend can mail

Gas leak poses threat at Bay water plant

By RICH ADAMS

A tank leaking lethal chlorine gas posed a threat to a section of Bay St. Louis Friday, but Bay St. Louis firemen quickly eliminated the danger when they whisked the faulty container to the Catahoula Dump.

The leaking container was discovered Friday morning at the St. Charles Street water purification pumping facility.

Bay police and firemen responded to the emergency by sending units to the scene and removing the tank to a sanitary land fill near the Catahoula Community.

Bay St. Louis Utilities and Water Foreman Alton Sick said the leak was the result of corrosion.

Assistant Bay St. Louis Fire Chief Andrew Lizana and Fireman Keith Starita donned oxygen masks and gloves and cautiously removed the tank from the pumping station.

The two firemen supported the tank between them in the bed of a fire truck while Fireman Don San Filippo drove to an isolated land fill near Catahoula.

During the emergency, the Bay Fire Department was in contact with Chemtrec, a 24-hour emergency service for fire and police departments.

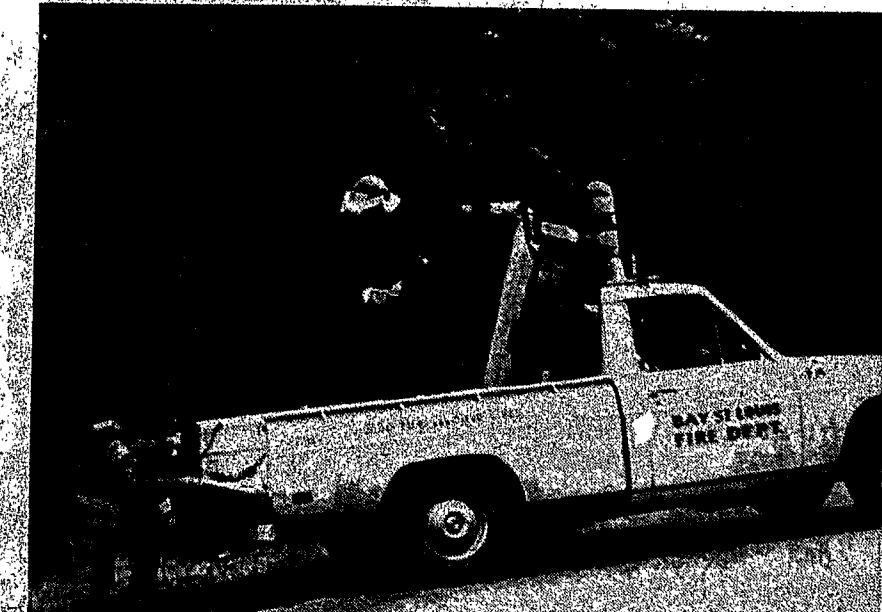

Chemtrec, sponsored by the Manufacturing Chemists Association in Washington, D.C., offers information and instructions for emergency crews in the event of a chemical related mishap.

The organization instructed Bay units to remove the leaking tank to neutralize the chemicals.

According to Bay Fire Chief Richard Fayard, the tank only contained about one gallon of the toxic chemical when the trucks arrived in Catahoula.

He said most of the gas had harmlessly leaked out of the tank during the trip to the North Hancock County community.

No evacuation of the area around the St. Charles Street well was conducted during removal operations.

The tank was taken from a water purification pumping station on St. Charles Street in Bay St. Louis. Rust had reportedly eaten through the bottom of the tank and the deadly gas was leaking through the corrosion. The tank was transported to a land fill in Catahoula. (Staff photo-Rich Adams)

School Board to meet with Supervisors

By LESLIE WILLIAMS

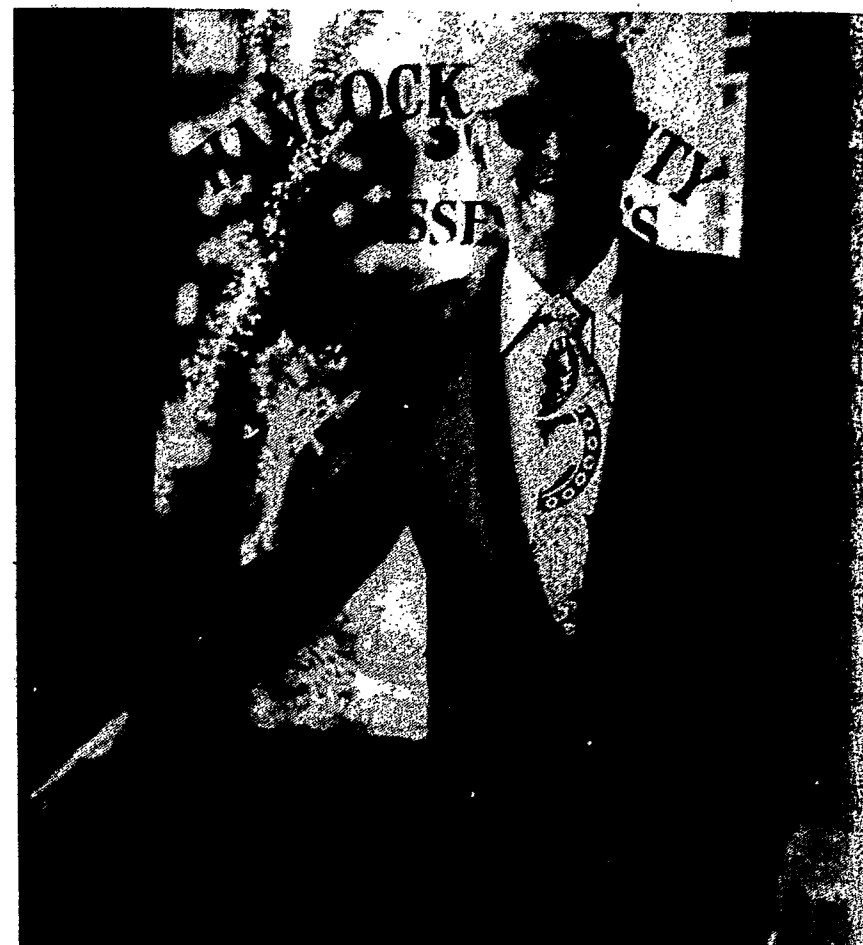

A resolution asking Hancock County Board of Supervisors to schedule another $3,383,000 Hancock County School bond issue election Jan. 13 was approved Friday by the Hancock County School Board.

School Superintendent Terrell Randolph said the school board will ask the Supervisors Dec. 18 to schedule the bond issue election Jan. 13.

"A Harrison County newspaper reported the school board as having $2 million in oil lease fund monies. This is not true, we have only $600,000 in oil lease funds, excluding budgeted operating costs," said School Board President Woodrow Ladner.

"We could use these funds to eliminate most of the crowding in Hancock County District Schools for 1979, but what about 1980—we wouldn't have any funds for repairs or renovations that may occur in 1980."

He said to repair leaking roofs alone at SCHOOL BOARD-Page 4

Heitzmann named '78 Outstanding Citizen

By EDGAR PEREZ

Hancock County's Outstanding Citizen for 1978 is George E. Heitzmann of Bay St. Louis, retired county assessor-tax collector.

Heitzmann was named to the honor Friday night at the County Chamber of Commerce's annual banquet at the Diamondhead Country Club.

Chamber President Dick Thomas, newly elected to a second term in that post, presented the award to Heitzmann, the second recipient of the honor.

The first Outstanding Citizen named last year is Norton Haas, Bay St. Louis businessman and entrepreneur, who spoke briefly Friday congratulating his successor.

Anderson, Haas with DEA, Birmingham News reveals

(Editors note: Sandra Baxley Taylor, Birmingham News staff writer attached to that newspaper's Mobile Bureau, developed the following account of marijuana trafficking through Stennis Field in Hancock County for publication in last Sunday's issues of The News. Her story appears to be the most comprehensive and detailed report printed thus far on the involvement and disappearance of Stennis Field operator Mel Anderson, and the involvement of other Hancock County residents in the affair.)

By SANDRA BAXLEY TAYLOR
News Staff Writer

BAY ST. LOUIS, Miss. — "Reuben" was the code name Mel Anderson was told to use when he dialed a telephone number to say he would join a marijuana run to Colombia Oct. 14.

Anderson, manager of Stennis International Airport just north of Bay St. Louis, had been given the phone number and code name by an undercover agent of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

The plan, for the first time ever confirmed by a federal agent, was simple.

But the outcome is a web of confusion which has drawn the attention of several federal agencies, including the State Department.

Anderson and two others were to fly a Constellation aircraft into Colombia to pick up 20,000 pounds of marijuana, the agent said.

Once back in America, DEA would take over.

The marijuana would be unloaded; the men on the plane would go free, and the marijuana would be sold to a known street pusher. The pusher would then be arrested before the marijuana actually hit street sales, the agent said.

ANDERSON, HOWEVER, never returned.

The fact became public knowledge several weeks ago when defense attorneys in a marijuana case in Mobile federal court asked the government to find Anderson.

Hancock chain letters illegal, Sheriff reports

By ELLIS CUEVAS

Hancock County Sheriff Sylvan Ladner Jr. reported Friday his office has been receiving reports a chain letter is making the rounds of Hancock County.

"As far as I am concerned, all types of chain letters are illegal," the sheriff stated. "I have been in touch with postal authorities this week on the matter and they have promised full cooperation in prosecuting for mail fraud any person apprehended in connection with chain letters."

Ladner noted he broke up a chain letter operation in Hancock County several years ago.

"I will prosecute to the fullest anyone involved in such operations in our County whether they use the mails or not," he warned.

Bay hires sewer job engineers

By ELLIS CUEVAS

The Bay St. Louis Council entered into a contract with Brown Engineers, Inc. in connection with a Small Cities Program to improve water and sewer facilities in the 500 block of Washington, Sycamore and Keller Streets.

Joe Brown Sr. said it will probably be early Spring before plans and specifications are ready for bidding on the $175,000 project to be funded by the federal government.

Ronnie Murray, administrator for the project and member of Gulf Regional Planning Commission, and Brown met with the Council at a recess meeting Friday.

The contract will be entered into subject to approval by Joseph Gex, Council attorney.

Brown and Murray both said the entire project should be completed by the Fall of 1979.

Only three convictions for murders in Hancock County have been handed down in the past 25 years, one in 1953 and two in 1974.

In September, 1953 Judge Grant presided over a two-day murder trial in which Mack C. Lewis was sentenced to death in the electric chair for the April, 1953 shooting murder of wealthy New Orleans businessman Kenneth L. Mason.

Mason was reportedly driving a white Cadillac convertible on the Gentilly Highway when he spotted Lewis hitchhiking, news reports from 1953 reflect. Lewis, a serviceman stationed with the Army, told Mason he was enroute to Buffalo, New York to visit his wife and one-month-old child.

Mason was reportedly in the habit of picking up hitchhikers, and offered Lewis a ride.

Near Pearllington, on what was called the old Lower Bay Road, Lewis allegedly pulled a gun on Mason, shot

OLG double ring rites join Tillman, Sellier

Miss Paula Elaine Tillman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Tillman of Mt. Shasta, Calif., and Stephen Frederick Sellier, son of Mrs. Mildred C. Sellier of Bay St. Louis, and the late Grannison Sellier, were married Friday evening, November 24, at a Nuptial Mass in Our Lady of the Gulf Catholic Church, Bay St. Louis.

Rev. Louis Lohm, associate pastor, performed the double ring ceremony. Nuptial music was presented by Mrs. John McKenna, organist, and Miss Tami McColly, vocalist.

Given in marriage by her brother William Tillman of Gulfport, the bride wore a formal antique white organza gown over bridal satin fashioned with a fitted bodice, round neckline and matching elbow length cape edged with a ruffle. A ruffe, topped by a silk rose, extended from the waistline to the hem bordering the skirt. Her fingertip length veil of illusion fell from a headpiece of flowers and she carried a bouquet of white minuet roses, heather and baby's breath.

Ann Sellier, cousin of the groom, attended the bride as maid of honor. She wore a formal burgundy gown fashioned with a matching lace shawl and carried a bouquet of burgundy and white carnations interspersed with baby's breath.

Mark Sellier of Bay St. Louis, who attended his brother as best man, gave the scripture readings during the ceremony.

A reception was held at the Bay St. Louis home of the groom's parents, where the bride's table, overlaid with a white imported embroidered cloth, held a three tier wedding cake trimmed with miniature pink spun sugar roses.

Schmidts honored here

on 25th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Schmidt of Metairie, La., were honored with a dinner Sunday in Bay St. Louis on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary.

Hosts for the event were her brothers and sisters-in-law Mr. and Mrs. Joe Ladner of Gulfport; Mr. and Mrs. Leo Ladner, Ansley; Mr. and Mrs. George Ladner, Pearlinton; and Mr. and Mrs. John Robert Ladner, Bay St. Louis; and her brothers-in-law and sisters, Mr. and Mrs. Nelius Favre, Bay St. Louis; Mr. and Mrs. William Irwin, Long Beach and Mr. and Mrs. James Sticker, Metairie.

Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt, the former Anna Jean Ladner, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ed Ladner of Ansley, were married November 28, 1953, in Our Lady of the Gulf Catholic Church. They have six sons, two daughters and two grandchildren.

Approximately 95 relatives attended.

Ole Miss professor explodes myth of 'Southern Woman'

The Southern woman of the 19th Century lived a life of ease on a pedestal built by Southern males.

Not so, says a University of Mississippi professor who will direct students in an in-depth study of the experiences of Southern women in an innovative interdisciplinary course being offered at Ole Miss this spring.

"In antebellum days, even wives of plantation owners had their hands full, managing large operations that often went far beyond the heavy duties of running a big house and large staff of slaves," said Dr. Joanne V. Hawks, assistant professor of history and dean of women at Ole Miss.

"Women in poor farm families, of course, worked alongside men in the fields and ran the household. It was not an easy life.

"By the early 20th Century, women were becoming involved in business, the professions and politics, even though they could not vote. Many of their ideas were far more 'rebellious' than is generally thought. The myth of the idle Southern woman is just that — a myth," she said.

Students in her course will use letters, diaries, journals, and oral statements by Southern women in an attempt to develop deeper understanding of the roles and thoughts of women in Southern society.

The first course is the first offering in the University's new Southern Studies program. Students may also receive credit for it in English or history. A full Southern Studies curriculum will be inaugurated in the fall of 1979.

The seminar course, titled "Women in the South," will feature guest lectures from women in literary and other fields who will discuss their experiences as women growing up in the South. Students will be encouraged to conduct original research.

History students, for example, might choose to conduct oral history projects, or students in English might study women literary figures, Dr. Hawks said.

"What Southern men thought that women thought is much more widely known than what women were actually thinking and doing," said Dr. Hawks. "One of the purposes of this course is to let students discover from the writings of women the attitudes 'One of the purposes of this course is to let students discover from the writings of women the attitudes women actually held."

Dr. Hawks developed the course, which covers the antebellum to the modern period as a participant in the "Teaching Women's Literature from a Regional Perspective" project of the Modern Language Association's Commission on the Status of Women in the Profession. She was one of six professors from the Deep South chosen to participate in the nationwide project, supported by the federal Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education.

Development of the University's interdisciplinary Southern Studies curriculum is a project of the University's new Center for the Study of Southern Culture, a far-reaching program of teaching, research and service aimed at increasing understanding of the Southern heritage.

JAN LADNER

Ladner, Phillips engagement told

Mr. and Mrs. Herman F. Ladner Sr. of Dedeaux Community announce the engagement of their daughter Jan to Earl Phillips Jr., son of Mrs. Doris Phillips of Gulfport and the late Earl Phillips Sr.

The bride elect, a graduate of Harrison Central High School, is attending Mississippi Gulf Coast Junior College, Jefferson Davis Campus, and will complete work for her associate business degree this semester.

Her maternal grandparents are Mrs. Eunice Shaw of Perkinston and the late J.S. Shaw Sr. Paternal grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. Filman Ladner.

The prospective groom, a graduate of Harrison Central High School, owns and operates Phillips Equipment Service.

His maternal grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. Willie Wilkinson and paternal grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. John Wes Phillips.

The marriage will be solemnized at 3 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 16.

News Briefs

PERSONAL SATIRE
A special hour-long documentary, "Like the Wind," looks at the lives of five people from different religious backgrounds, all of whom have one thing in common - a deep spiritual commitment. "Like the Wind" can be seen at 7 p.m., Tuesday, December 26, on the Mississippi ETV Network. In five separate program segments, the viewer follows each of the five - a charismatic Christian, an orthodox Jew, a Baptist, a Quaker and a Catholic - through daily routines and religious services. The program was not designed to be about religions or theology, according to producers, but rather about people and their personal faiths.

POLITICAL SATIRE
The second of this season's
"Mark Russell Comedy Specials" will be broadcast at 7 p.m., Wednesday, December
27, on the Mississippi ETV Network.
Live from Buffalo, N.Y., political satirist Mark Russell focuses on recent news events and political activities, using his own blend of jokes, one-liners and satirical songs to puncture the pompous, belittle the bigwigs and ridicule the ridiculous.

We should be proud!

We feel it was a great honor to have the President of Gulf Oil Corporation as guest speaker for the 1978 Annual Hancock County Chamber of Commerce banquet Friday.

We as a county should be proud of our native son, Mr. James Lee who has obtained the position of president of such a large corporation as Gulf Oil.

Mr. Lee, like several native sons, has achieved great honors, and we should all be happy for their endeavors and congratulate them all.

We want to thank Mr. Lee for taking time from his busy schedule to be again at home with us in Hancock County. Your words of wisdom at the Chamber banquet will remain with us for a very long time.

We, as Hancock Countians, wish you continued success.
P.S. come see us again soon!

cluding leaders of the governmental agencies of Hancock County and Bay St. Louis, and the presidents of several Chambers of Commerce from Mississippi Gulf Coast communities.

The Waveland community was represented by former alderman Charles Johnson.

Rev. Charles Clark of the Waveland Assembly of God, a member of the Chamber's Board of Directors, delivered the invocation.

Newly-elected Chamber Vice President A. J. Turner of Marine Concrete Structures, Port Bienville, was cited with a plaque presented by Ms. Mary Perkins, Chamber treasurer and membership chairman, for his efforts in increasing the organization's membership during the past year.

Outgoing Chamber Vice President L. J. Breaux introduced the speaker for the evening, Hancock County native James E. Lee of Pittsburgh, Pa., president of Gulf Oil Corporation.

Thomas, in presenting the award to Heitzmann, noted, "This award is given to the person we feel has contributed a great deal of his time and effort to furthering the growth of Hancock County."

Heitzmann "...has given more than 42 years of service to this community," Thomas continued.

"He has received outstanding service citations from President Harry Truman, Older American Area-wide Model Program, International Association of Assessors and Appraisers, State Association of Tax Commissioners, and National Association of Review Appraisers," the Chamber president continued.

"He was cited by the Mississippi Assessors and Collectors for more than 15 years of continuous service on that group's executive board, as well as having served as president and vice president of the organization," Thomas continued in his testimonial to Heitzmann.

"Special recognition has come to him from the Chamber of Commerce, Congressman Trent Lott, Senators James Eastland and John Stennis, as well as a special note of appreciation from Gov. Cliff Finch," Thomas added. In addition, Thomas noted Heitzmann has received special citations from the Cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland, Hancock County Board of Supervisors, and the Hancock County School Board.

Heitzmann is married to the former Margaret Dubuisson.

Following the award presentation, Heitzmann received several congratulatory telegrams, including messages from his children and grandchildren.

School Board... Continued from Page 1

Hancock North Central's Elementary and Senior-Junior High Schools will have to pay approximately $150,000," explained Ladner.

The capital improvements bond issue will supply funds to construct a South Central High School, renovate the Hancock North Central Attendance Center and construct a Special Education Center for the handicapped.

Randolph said some have speculated that more than the stated $2,264,806 will be spent on the South Central High School, because a clause in the bond issue resolution reads, "at a cost of $2,264,806 or as much as is necessary."

He said some have interpreted this clause to mean that more money can be spent on the High School.

This is incorrect, affirmed the superintendent. Hancock County School District Board Attorney Joseph Gex said that by law no more than $2,264,806 can be spent on construction of the South Central High School.

Randolph said the clause was worded this way, so that if less money was necessary to construct the high school we could use the money for something else.

him five times after robbing him of $35, and drove off in the late-model car.

Lewis was stopped by police in Petersburg, Virginia on a speeding charge a week-and-a-half after Mason was reported as missing. Then Hancock County Sheriff, the late John A. Egloff, extradited Lewis to Bay St. Louis.

Lewis confessed committing the murder, saying, "I wanted to take Mr. Mason's car. I waited until we passed the last bridge, and then pulled my revolver and made him pull off the road."

He reportedly deliberated about what to do with Mason for five minutes after robbing the New Orleans businessman. "I thought I had better kill him. So, I shot him once in the stomach," Lewis confessed.

"Mr. Mason said, 'Why did you shoot me?' I backed up a few times and shot him four times. He fell to the ground and didn't make any more noise," Lewis added.

Egloff and Mississippi Highway Patrolmen found Mason's body 75 feet off the dirt road known as old Lower Bay Road in Hancock County following a two-and-a-half hour search on foot and horseback.

District Attorney Boyce C. Holliman represented the state in the trial, along with then Bay St. Louis City Attorney Dan M. Russell Jr.

Lewis' trial began Monday, Sept. 26, 1953. After two days of questioning prospective jurors, both prosecution and defense felt the jury would be fair and impartial.

The 12-man jury consisted of Ray G. Lee, Willard Favre, Thomas Karl Sr., Edward Estana, Easton Cuevas, Lavern Brogdon, Lovander Necaise, Carl Miller, James Kimmell, W. R. Ladner, Alvin McGathan and Vernon Cuevas.

The key to the trial's outcome was whether a signed confession by Lewis could be admitted as evidence.

Judge Grant sent the jury out and Lewis took the stand before a courtroom packed with spectators.

Under questioning, Lewis said he signed the confession because he was frightened. He added no punishment or threats had been used to force him to admit to the slaying, but said New Orleans Detectives Allen Dupre and Lawrence Cassanova had told him things would "go easy" if he confessed.

Sheriff Egloff denied the promises were made to Lewis, and Grant admitted the confession as evidence.

The jury returned to the courtroom and the confession was read. After closing statements, the jury deliberated for just 30 minutes before delivering its verdict of guilty.

Judge Grant handed down a death sentence, and the execution was scheduled for Nov. 30, 1953 in the Hancock County Jail, using the state's portable electric chair.

Lewis appealed the Circuit Court's verdict unsuccessfully, making his final request for a Supreme Court reversal of the verdict on Apr. 14, 1955.

Records do not give the date of Lewis' execution, or where the electrocution took place. According to Hancock County Circuit Court records, an execution report verifying Lewis' death was received by the Circuit Court Clerk on Jan. 24, 1955.

Shortage... Continued from Page 1

recent prohibition against addition of an octane-improving agent to gasoline as contributing factors in the current unleaded situation, as well as the ever-increasing number of cars requiring that type fuel.

"With the recently passed energy bill, we made a small step in the direction of a comprehensive energy program for the U.S.," he continued.

"The bill gets our nation finally off the starting line, and it moves American policy closer to the realities of a world in which oil and gas are going to be scarce," he warned.

"But it is only one, halting step. It's a beginning. But only a beginning. And in energy, we can't live forever with a beginning."

"There are other things that must be done. We've still got a long way to go in our understanding of the supply-demand factors and the economics, as well as the strategic importance of energy to our place as a nation in the world power structure," Lee urged.

He said the current political crisis situation in Iran, if not settled soon, could create another "disastrous shortage" of crude for the United States.

"And as long as we are dependent on foreign imports for a disproportionate share of our energy supply, we must be concerned for our national security," he warned further.

Citing the various other domestic sources of energy available, including coal, uranium, shale oil, geothermal and solar sources, Lee continued his plea for a release of the oil industry from government regulation.

"Our energy dependence is ironic to say the least, in view of the fact that, even though the U.S. is running perilously low on domestic energy resources developed and available for use, there is still plenty of domestic energy to be had if the industry is given sufficient freedom to produce it," he emphasized.

Pilgrimage... Continued from Page 1

checks for reservations to Bay-Waveland Yacht Club, P.O. Box 367, Bay St. Louis, 39520.

After the luncheon at 2 p.m. the tour will resume at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Henry Maggio on 105 Whispering Pines, Waveland.

Built in 1954 and heavily damaged in Hurricane Camille, the home was later purchased and repaired by the Maggios.

The rear of the house opens on to a brick patio with a view of the Gulf. Refreshments will be served on the patio.

The 'Sea Chanty,' home of CDR. and Mrs. Julian Wright at 426 South Beach, Waveland will be next stop on the Pilgrimage.

Built in the Italianate style which flourished briefly after the Civil War, the home is noted for its strength, having survived the direct onslaught of two hurricanes.

The home is furnished with American and English antiques.

Following the Sea Chanty will be the home of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Rawlins at 540 South Beach Blvd., Waveland.

Building of the home in 1977 fulfilled a dream of the owners to spend their retiring years near the water.

Pulpit furniture from the Log Lutheran Church in North Carolina, which was built by Mrs. Rawlin's great grandfather, will be on display at the Philip's home.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kidd of 804 South Beach, Waveland will be hosts at the final home visited on the Bay-Waveland Pilgrimage.

Huge oaks surround their cedar home. All first floor rooms have French doors leading to a breezy 75-foot veranda overlooking the Gulf.

The Bay-Waveland tour is one of 10 in Pilgrimage '79 sponsored by the Mississippi Gulf Coast Council of Garden Clubs during the March 22 to April 1 event.

The Council consists of 34 clubs in 11 communities in three counties that border the Gulf of Mexico.

The pilgrimage will feature homes in areas along the coast in the following order: Gulfport, March 24; Long Beach, March 25; Pass Christian, March 27; Bay-Waveland, March 28; Gulf Hill, March 29; Diamondhead, March 30; Biloxi, March 31; and Pascagoula, Moss Point, and Gautier all on April 1.

Homes to be featured in Diamondhead from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. include those of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde P. Bonwell, 5612 Ahuwa, Place; Mr. and Mrs. Albert F. Doussan Jr., 7423 Mahalo Hui Drive; Mr. and Mrs. E.C. Dean, 6825 Hilo Street and Col. and Mrs. Fred Roseman of 655 Koule Drive.

Lunch for those on the Diamondhead tour will begin at noon at the Diamondhead Country Club.

The defense claimed Anderson would have been a key witness who would have testified DEA was behind the July 23 marijuana shipment into Stennis for which seven defendants are being tried.

If entrapment by the federal government could be proved, the defendants would have a better chance of going free.

In open court, U.S. Atty. William Kimbrough informed the defense that DEA told him Anderson was either dead or in prison following an Oct. 14 plane crash in Colombia.

The details of the crash, if it took place, was not known.

SINCE THE COURT appearance, federal officials have been given the following story by informants. While federal authorities say they cannot be absolutely sure this is what happened to Anderson, it does represent what they say is the best information they have on his disappearance.

Anderson and his two companions are said by informants to have picked up the marijuana in Colombia as scheduled, and took off.

After takeoff, informants have told federal agents, the plane crashed. The informants have said the crash was due to hydraulic failure, but some federal officials believe the plane could have been shot down.

Anderson, severely burned, died immediately, according to an informant who claims he was in Colombia at the time of the crash.

The other two people in the plane were said to have been taken hostage by the marijuana-sellers on the ground, who were angry because the marijuana burned before they were paid for it.

Backers of the venture in New Orleans and Miami are said by informants to have paid a ransom for the return of the two survivors, and the survivors reportedly were sent back to Miami.

One was reported badly burned, while the other barely had a scratch. To prove Anderson's death, they reportedly brought his jawbone, which included teeth, for identification.

Federal agents say they now are looking for the survivors.

SOME FEDERAL agents, though, are skeptical of the story told by informants.

"The main reason I don't believe it is because the exact location of the crash was given to us," a drug agent said. "There was someone at that site within 30 hours and there was no sign of a plane crash."

Neither were there signs of a fire or of a bulldozer covering the wreckage, as informants had said.

More puzzling was the discovery of the crash of a DC4 which apparently had gone down in the same area that same day, he said.

The informants say they have no problem believing the Colombian government would shoot a plane down.

SINCE NOV. 1, the government has issued notice it will shoot any planes illegally in the area.

"The Colombian government is in the pot business," federal officials charged. "What this notice means is, you either buy from us or we shoot you down. It effectively cuts down on competition from private growers."

One agent said he knew of more than 80 marijuana planes which have crashed in Colombia this year, though how many were shot down he does not know.

Meanwhile, the story grows more complicated by the day with new developments.

For example, a second pilot who had worked out of Stennis has been discovered by federal officials to be in a Colombia prison, with his arrest apparently unrelated to Anderson's disappearance.

Also, federal officials say they have learned Anderson's partner (before the July 23 marijuana shipment), Edd Conn, was in Colombia the day of Anderson's reported death.

THE PILOT NOW in prison in Colombia, according to federal officials, is Clifford Berry, who was arrested by the Colombian government Sept. 11 in Rio Rocha.

American officials learned of Berry's imprisonment when Colombian officials sent official queries to Conn.

Conn, U.S. officials say, is the owner of the plane Berry was flying, supposedly on a charter from Stennis to Miami.

Conn has told authorities he was in Colombia Oct. 14, the day of Anderson's reported death, trying to free his plane and his friend Berry.

American officials do not know what charges are filed against Berry.

IN THE COMPLICATED story which is beginning to surface about the ill-fated marijuana run to Colombia that may have cost Mel Anderson his life, the following people play leading roles in the story:

Mel Anderson, 37, husband and father of two. No known criminal record.

Joe Haas, 36, native of Bay St. Louis. Pilot for a small New Orleans airline for 12 years. He is an admitted DEA undercover agent and is also a chief prosecution witness in the Mobile trial. Due to a $45,000 bounty that federal officials say has been put on Haas' head by drug traffickers, it is expected U.S. Atty. William Kimbrough will request Judge Virgil Pittman to order no sketches or photos.

Edd Conn, 38, key prosecution witness. Under indictment for arson in Jonesboro, Ark., and under indictment in Thomas County, Ga., on charges that he brought in a plane load of marijuana. Until Anderson backed out, he was to be a partner at Stennis, according to Anderson's wife.

Sharon Anderson, wife of Mel Anderson. In his absence, she is operating Stennis Airport.

SHARON AND MEL Anderson were high school sweethearts in Durango, Colo., the small town in which they grew up.

"I've loved Mel since I was 16," she says. "That's why it is so hard to give him up."

Mrs. Anderson talked with The News for several reasons, she said. One was to keep her husband from being labeled "a pot smuggler." And the other was to dissociate her husband's disappearance from the upcoming marijuana trial in January.

"I don't think anyone ever told Me he would be a witness," she said. "He would have testified there was DEA involvement in the July 23 shipment."

July 1 was a red-letter day in the Anderson household, she remembers. "That was the day Mel took over Stennis. It was his lifelong dream to operate his own airport. He had such plans for this place...it would be perfect for shipping livestock...there were so many plans..."

Ms. Anderson said Conn, whom she had never met before moving to Stennis, was to come up with financial backing. He and her husband were to form a corporation to operate the airport.

SHE TOOK their two daughters to Colorado to say goodbye to both families (they had lived in Texas that past year) and joined Mel only about a week before the marijuana shipment, on which the current indictments in Mobile federal court are based, arrived at the airport.

"Even then, something was wrong and Mel knew it. He just didn't know what," she said.

Other sources, including witness in the current trial, claim Anderson showed up at the airport the night of July 23, before the marijuana plane arrived. "He was angry," one source said. He walked over to one of the men and warned. "If Joe Haas has anything to do with this, you're going to get busted."

Anderson then went to call his lawyer, picked up his wife and kids and traveled to New Orleans to spend the night.

"Mel was advised by his attorney if he really believed something was going on we should get out of the area," said Mrs. Anderson, explaining the trip to New Orleans.

From then on, Anderson was so angry at Conn he was barely speaking, Mrs. Anderson says.

"He told Edd to forget the part-

Wastewater... Continued from Page 1

Officials at the meeting were told if they didn't vote for the regional wastewater treatment commission they might lose federal funds, said Longo.

Federal funds are available for 75 percent of the construction cost of an approved wastewater management system. The remaining 25 percent would come from local funds.

The commission, if approved by the state legislature, will implement the Gulf Coast-Wide Wastewater Management Plan.

"I don't like anyone trying to threaten me or intimidate me with the loss of federal money," emphasized the mayor, "I don't think that I like that at all."

Longo said he was told Waveland would have to pay $7,000 a month or $84,000 a year if the 201-208 Plan is adopted by the counties.

There will be a public workshop on the 201-208 study at the City-County Library in Bay St. Louis Thursday, Jan. 4, at 10 a.m.

"This regional concept of treating and collecting wastewater has been in the makings since about 1964," recalled Longo.

nership, though Edd could stay on and rent a place for his aircraft sales," she says.

"Edd thought he (Anderson) would cool off, forgive and forget, but I knew he never would."

FROM THEN ON, pressures on her husband mounted, Mrs. Anderson said.

Anderson told a private detective friend that government agents had visited him and warned him to keep out of government business.

Government agents tell the story a bit differently.

"They say they have reason to believe Anderson was involved in the Thomas County, Ga., marijuana shipment for which Conn now is under indictment."

They told Anderson so.

Mrs. Anderson said her husband was warned he would be indicted if he didn't cooperate with the Government.

government agents said, though, that Anderson was not forced into going to Colombia. "We told them if anything looked wrong about the deal, not to go," one federal agent said.

THE DIRECTOR OF Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission, Wilson Webre, is siding entirely with the Andersons. The commission oversees operation of Stennis airport.

Webre has a strong warning to issue to the U.S. government in fact.

"Our concern is entirely with Mrs. Anderson. We find it ironic that the U.S. government can bring 900 bodies from Guyana in five days and can't bring one from Colombia in six weeks."

Webre says he doesn't care what government agency is involved. "If it's Congress or the Supreme Court or DEA or CIA, they can stay out of Stennis with their damn clandestine operations. We didn't like the first one and we won't like the next one."

"Let them go find a cow pasture."

Webre's main gripe, as is Sheriff Sylvan J. Ladner's, seems to be that DEA did not notify county officials in advance.

DEA officials say they have spent hours apologizing for "the oversight."

"If we (the sheriff's office) had come upon them unloading pot that night there could have been a shootout," Ladner said.

"It could have been government agents who got shot. They should have told us..."

(Echo Editor's note: Webre reports he and Ladner are seeking a written apology from DEA but without success thus far.

Conn, after making bond in Thomasville, reportedly returned to Hancock County, and made an appointment to confer with Webre last Monday. Conn never kept that appointment, however, and is reported to have flown out of the county last Sunday.

Webre notes among his principal concerns in the matter is the possibility the Stennis affair could detract from the good name of Mississippi Sen. John C. Stennis after whom the local airport is named, since the issue has become a matter of national news.)

Spider mite threat remains for plants moved indoors

Many homeowners who carry their potted plants inside for the winter forget that insect-related pests are still a threat to their plants.

"One of the most frequent pests of potted plants are spider mites," says Dr. J. P. Harris, area pest management specialist, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

"They cause the most damage where plants are grown at high temperature and low humidity," he noted. Heated homes or buildings are ideal for their buildup. Infested plants should not be mixed with plants not infested, since the pests may spread."

Leaves lightly infested with spider mites have pale spots showing through them, describes the specialist. When heavily infested, entire leaves appear light in color, dry up, often turn reddish-brown and fall. Plants may lose their vigor and die.

Tiny eight-legged mites, on close examination, can be found on the underside of leaves. They appear as tiny, moving dots on the leaves, and may be green, red, yellow or black.

The color varies with the type of food consumed. The undersurface of infested leaves may have silken threads spun across them.

After mating, the female may lay up to 100 eggs in her lifetime. The eggs are spherical, shiny, and straw-colored and are attached to the undersides of the leaves, usually to the web spun by the mite as it moves over the plant.

Eggs hatch in three to 20 days, depending on climatic conditions. Young begin feeding by sucking juices from the plant immediately after hatching. They pass through several six-legged larval stages before reaching their eight-legged adult stage.

Frequent inspection and early treatment is the best approach to controlling these pests. It usually is necessary to treat weekly with two to three applications to control those mites which hatch between treatments.

Infested plants should be taken outside or to an area not frequented by man and animals to prevent contamination by the insecticide treatment.

Applications of 18.5 percent dicofol (Kelthane) emulsifiable concentrate at one teaspoon per gallon of water or 57 percent malathion emulsifiable concentrate at two teaspoons per gallon of water may be used for control of spider mites.

These chemicals may injure some houseplants so check labels before using. Spray underneath all leaf surfaces for complete coverage. See individual product labels for usage and precautions.

Many other insect pests such as aphids, scale insects and mealybugs attack potted plants. Contact your local Cooperative Extension Service office and request Information Sheet 872, "Insect Control for Houseplants," for further information.

ROUGH GOING AT PLAY

In 1977, 167,000 people - mostly children between the ages of five and ten - received hospital emergency room treatment for injuries on public and home playground equipment, according to an estimate by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission. Swings were responsible for the most injuries - 72,000.

CHRISTMAS EVE ON SESAME STREET - "Christmas Eve on Sesame Street" finds investigative reporter Kermit the Frog, far left, telling Big Bird and Patty the results of his interviews with kids on how big, fat Santa gets down skinny, little chimneys. A crash diet, rubber chimneys and long arms are suggestions that don't allay Big Bird's fears that Santa won't show up. ## Clothes, carpet pests prevalent in area homes Clothes moths and carpet beetles, both destructive pests, may be found in nearly all homes in Mississippi throughout the year.

"These pests feed on materials such as hair, fur, wool, feathers and a wide variety of products made from these materials," reports Dr. J.P. Harris, area pest management specialist, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

"Blankets, clothing, draperies, carpets, brushes and upholstery are also attacked," he added.

"Good housekeeping will help in the control of these pests," says the specialist.

"Do not let dust and lint accumulate. Vacuum rugs or carpets, especially the edges, as well as areas covered by furniture. Clean draperies often and keep clothing clean by washing or dry cleaning."

The most common clothes moths in Mississippi are the webbing clothes moth and the casebearing clothes moth.

The small, buff-colored adult moths lay eggs on products in which the larvae feed; eggs hatch after five days. This larval period varies according to climatic conditions and food supply. Larvae of some species live in silken cases which are dragged about as they feed on fabrics, eating small holes through them.

When development is complete the larvae add silk to the case to form a tough cocoon. The adult moth emerges from the cocoon in one to four weeks. The complete life cycle of the clothes moth may pass in two months or may be prolonged over several years. Several years of development may include long periods of larval inactivity.

Several species of carpet beetles occur in Mississippi homes. Adults are small, hard-shelled oval beetles, usually about one-eighth inch long, and vary in color.

Adult female beetles may each lay 100 eggs which hatch into oval, elongated larvae about one-fourth inch long with bristles covering their bodies.

Several species of carpet beetles occur in Mississippi homes. Adults are small, hard-shelled oval beetles, usually about one-eighth inch long, and vary in color.

Adult female beetles may each lay 100 eggs which hatch into oval, elongated larvae about one-fourth inch long with bristles covering their bodies.

The larvae avoid light and feed in dark cracks, crevices or folds. Larvae complete their light growth in a period of three months to three years, depending on climatic conditions and food supply. After each molt, they feed and then return to a hiding place to molt again. The pupal stage may last one to four weeks.

Adults are attracted to light and are often found on windows or around flowers. Adults are good fliers and may spread in this manner, although infestations may also spread in materials infested with eggs, larvae or pupae.

Stored materials subject to attack by clothes moths and carpet beetles should be thoroughly cleaned and stored in a clean chest, closet or other container.

The container should be tightly closed and moth balls or flakes placed into it at the rate of one pound per 100 cubic feet of space.

Do not depend upon this method of protection when storing fabrics over an extended period of several months or more, cautions Dr. Harris.

For closet treatment of clothes moths, a household spray containing 2 percent chlordane, 0.5 percent diazinon, or 0.18 dichlorvos (Capona) provides good control.

Remove clothes from the closet before spraying and treat walls thoroughly. Spray the entire surface of all closet walls, particularly around the baseboards and edges of the floor. Treat again in three months.

For rugs and carpet treatment of carpet beetles, use household preparations containing 2 percent chlordane, 0.5 percent diazinon, 0.5 percent lindane, 3 percent malathion or 3 percent ronnel. Spray as for clothes moths. See individual product labels for usage and precautions.

Further information can be found in publication 245, "Control Household Insects," available at a local Cooperative Extension Service office.

WHEN CATS
CATCH COLD

Cats are as susceptible as their owners to viruses that cause respiratory distress.

Unfortunately, cats rarely escape with the feline

equivalent of the "common cold."

They more often develop the fever, sneezing, and runny nose that signal a major problem for the pet owner.

Cats are infected when tiny virus particles floating through the air enter the mouth or nose and grow on the cells lining the nasal passages.

These viruses become firmly entrenched in the cat's respiratory system, causing symptoms lasting a few days or weeks to as long as two months.

There are also cases where an apparently healthy pet carried a hidden virus in fection but resisted it until the pet was subjected to crowded living conditions, poor diet or a similar stressful situation.

Mississippi Crop & Livestock Reporting Service

NOVEMBER, 1978

The November 15, 1978 Index of Prices Received by Mississippi farmers for all commodities increased two points (one percent) for the previous month's index; the Mississippi Crop and Livestock Reporting Service announced today. The index was 243 percent of its January-December 1967 average for the month ended November 15, 1978. The current index is 37 points (18 percent) above the November 15, 1977 average.

The All Crops Index (1967 equals 100) at 259 was three points (one percent) above the index for October 1978. Cotton prices and soybean prices increased over October levels. The Livestock and Livestock Products Index (1967 equals 100) for November was 225 percent. The same figure was reported in the October index. Prices received for hogs, cows and commercial broilers fell during the month. Prices received for other livestock and livestock products either increased or remained at last month's level.

NOTICE: The previous month's price for milk, soybeans and cotton relates to the average prices for all sales during the month.

BROILERS

WEEK ENDING: Dec. 2

BROILER-TYPE

Hatcheries in the State set 5.9 million eggs for broiler chicks during the week ending December 2, 1978, two percent below the previous week but six percent above the 5,647,000 set the corresponding week a year ago.

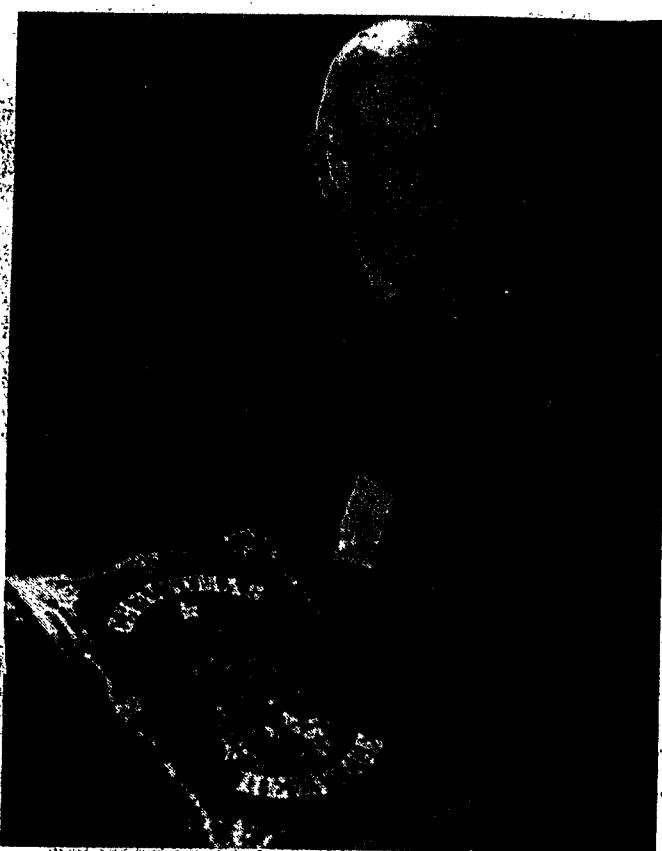

There were 5.4 million broiler chicks placed on Mississippi farms during the week ending December 2, 1978, one percent below the previous week but seven percent above the 5,087,000 placed the corresponding week a year ago.

Cumulative placements for 1978 are 263 million broiler chicks - six percent above a year earlier.

EGG-TYPE

Hatcheries in the State set 273,000 eggs for egg-type chicks during the week ending Dec. 2, 1978, 14 percent below the previous week but 69 percent above the 162,000 set during the comparable week a year ago. Hatch of egg-type chicks was 150,000, three percent above the previous week and four percent above the 144,000 hatched during the comparable week a year ago.

In the five states that accounted for about 25 percent of the hatch of all egg-type chicks in the U.S. in 1977, settings during the week ending Dec. 2, 1978 were up 34 percent but hatchings were down 12 percent from a year ago.

Energy Saving Tips In The Kitchen

Though remembered now with nostalgia, the wood stove is a thing of the past. Most of us rely on gas or electricity to cook with, and as everyone knows, both are getting scarcer and more expensive. So today's answer to "what's cooking?" is "energy," and here are some timely tips to help conserve that precious commodity in the kitchen.

• Always place pan on surface unit before turning the heat on - heating air is wasteful. On electric ranges, utensils should fit the surface heating unit exactly; on gas ranges, flame should not extend beyond the bottom of the pot. There's no need to waste energy by heating the sides of the utensils.

• Use the smallest size pan possible for the quantity of food to be cooked.

• Cover pans when possible so heat and moisture can't escape; be sure covers fit snugly. Turn heat off a few minutes before food is cooked; heat retained in covered pan will complete cooking.

• Use a minimum of liquid or fat - it shortens cooking time. "Waterless" cooking preserves nutrients, too, and can be done in snugly covered pots over low heat.

• Discard warped or dented pans if they do not use heat efficiently and are apt to develop hot spots that can burn foods.

• Invest in some heavy-weight aluminum cookware that spreads heat fast and evenly and retains it longer. The newest, with SilverStone premium non-stick surfaces, are highly efficient and can also be used on top of the range to bake meatloaves, potatoes and even cakes. And it's a cinch to clean, an added advantage that saves you energy.

• Use the oven only when necessary - surface units use less energy and cook more efficiently. Preheat the oven only when essential. Foods that take more than an hour to cook can be placed in a cold oven.

• Don't thaw frozen foods in the oven - a frozen roast takes about 2/3rds more cooking time than one that's been thawed.

• When the oven is on, cook several things at the same time but don't overload; air must circulate freely for maximum efficiency. Keep pans about 1-inch away from oven walls and stagger pans on shelves so that one is not directly above the other.

• Don't peek - each time the oven door is opened, temperature can drop as much as 75 degrees.

One day we'll probably be cooking with solar heat, but until then, the less energy we use, the longer it will last.

MISSISSIPPI WEEKLY WEATHER & CROP REPORT

WEEK ENDING: Dec. 2

WEATHER SUMMARY

(National Weather Service): Above normal precipitation and temperatures prevailed during the week. Temperatures averaged from 1 degree above normal in the north central to 7 degrees above normal in the coastal section. The warmest temperature was 82 degrees at Columbia on the 27th and the coldest was 27 degrees at Tupelo on the 1st.

Rainfall averaged from 1 1/4 inches in the north central to about 3 1/4 inches coastal. The greatest 24-hour rainfall amount was 2.55 inches at Gulfport.

Continued warm over the weekend before turning colder Sunday night. A general heavy rain of one to three inches except two to six inches in many extreme northern and western counties Sunday and Sunday night.

CROP SUMMARY: Much needed rains improved the condition of winter grazing crops throughout most of the state; however, mild temperatures and sunshine are needed before much grazing will be available. The rains interrupted fieldwork in many areas. Where conditions allowed, farmers were cutting stalks, applying lime and winding up harvest. Other activities included planting wheat, feeding livestock, and making plans for next year.

Soil moisture supplies were generally adequate throughout the state. An average of 2.0 days was suitable for fieldwork compared to 4.0 days last week and 0.4 days for the same week last year.

The soybean acreage was 98 percent harvested compared to last year's 83 percent and the average of 84 percent. Pecans were 71 percent harvested compared to 81 percent last year and 75 percent for the average.

Winter wheat planting advanced to 93 percent planted and the condition of the crop improved but it is still rated only fair. Pastures were in poor to fair condition. Livestock condition was fair.

with many cattlemen feeding to hold condition.

CONDITION

TALLAHATCHIE CO. "Finally received enough moisture to help winter grazing and cereal crops. More subsoiling and fall plowing done this year than in last fifteen. Most farmers deer hunting all week."

TUNICA CO. "Winter rains have stopped all farm work."

COVINGTON CO. "Received about two inches of rain this week. Farmers busy applying nitrogen to winter pastures."

LAUDERDALE CO. "Showers on Wednesday and Thursday were welcomed. Winter grazing crops beginning to grow."

HANCOCK CO. "Rain helped winter grazing crops very much. Late planted ryegrass is beginning to look good. Also, rain has cut down on fire hazard conditions."

Legislators to receive MEC rural health plan analysis

A Mississippi Economic Council analysis of a rural health plan proposed by Governor Cliff Finch will be presented to members of the state Legislature before the 1979 session, according to MEC President G.B. Beard of Jackson.

And MEC, the voice of business in Mississippi, has adopted a set of recommendations which it says, if implemented, would streamline and offer more efficient health services to rural residents.

The plan, "Mississippi Rural Health Development Plan," was released by Governor Cliff Finch in November, 1977. The proposed plan identified 12 "health-related initiatives" which are basic medical or health services with problems which impede the delivery of health care to rural Mississippians.

The plan outlines 63 specific tasks which the Governor feels must be accomplished to solve the problems associated with each "initiative."

These 63 specific tasks are assigned in the plan to 19 various agencies on the national, state and local levels. It also includes a competition date for each task.

The MEC study, conducted by a special committee chaired by Dr. Ed Hill, Hollandale family physician, pointed out that there are a number of bureaucratic loopholes and deficiencies in the plan. The special committee is a part of the Council's General Committee on Resource Development chaired by Jackson banker Paul Fugate.

Upon reviewing the analysis, MEC President Beard said, "The Governor's plan indicates that a number of different agencies have many different roles in the delivery of health care services in the state."

"The plan also makes it clear there is only minimal coordination of effort and programs among the major agencies involved in this process," he added.

The analysis further states that the picture of health care and planning painted by the Governor's plan is one of several bureaucracies conducting their own programs and projects, with little or no coordination and with resource wasting duplication.

Based on this analysis of the Governor's Rural Health Plan, the Mississippi Economic Council recommends that the state should develop a single comprehensive system of identifying health care needs and establishing health care priorities.

Also, MEC said, all statewide health planning, including regulation of health care facilities and certification of need for services, equipment, and facilities, should be centralized under the authority of the State Board of Health.

Let me listen to them and see what they do. They are there to give their opinion, and I could learn, if I should choose.

Help me to hold my head high and cheer for the winner, my friend.
Let me observe what it is that makes my friend a winner. Could it be that he spends more time preparing and learning the rules? Let me go home with my new found knowledge and practice to become a winner.
Help me to understand that sportsmanship is required of the loser.

As I compete in these games of life, whether I win, place or lose:
Let my objectives be in the right place and my priorities on the right thing.
Help me to remember that I'm a winner every day of my life.
Help me to remember that the very fact that I CAN compete - that I'm alive and healthy in mind and body - makes me a winner!

Students find sign language a prelude to deaf communication

By LESLIE WILLIAMS
Gathered inconspicuously in a rear room of the Bay Library on Monday and Tuesday nights, six local residents are learning American sign language (Ameslan) under the direction of Sister Dolores of the de l'Epee Center in Gulfport.

Charles Carver, of Waveland, himself an expert in Ameslan due to his own deafness, assists with the instructional duties.

The class, though joyful, is centered upon the sober purpose of eventually mastering total communication between the deaf and non-deaf.

"Total communication," says Sister Dolores, "is more likely when the individual realizes not every deaf person can lip read."

"Assuming the deaf can understand written communication—when some can't, and when some, like the non-deaf, have limited vocabularies, is another hindrance to total communication," continued the teacher.

Total communication, says Sister, is understanding the deaf; becoming aware of deaf-awareness activities; and helping deaf people become aware of their potential.

Peggy Tedford, choral director at Bay Senior High said during the class Tuesday night, "Well, even if I don't remember a sign taught, just being here has been worth the effort, because I now better understand deaf people and how they feel when they are trying to communicate with the non-deaf."

Sister Dolores thinks this is the key—identifying with the deaf.

She says course students Jude Ann Blaise, majoring in deaf education; Fran Trombley, Bay St. Louis mayor's secretary; her daughter, Ann; Ms. Tedford; Prima Wusack, City-County Library director; and her son, Joe, are the ones who will establish this total communication in the future.

Sister Dolores, an administrator at de l'Epee Deaf Center at 217 Cowan Road Gulfport, also teaches a course in Ameslan at the University of Southern Mississippi's Gulf Park Campus.

The de l'Epee center provides social and educational activities, and seeks pro legislation for the deaf.

Many obstacles face the deaf, said Sister Dolores.

A deaf person will go to a bank, utility company, or city hall with a dispute about a payment, and may not be able to communicate with personnel there.

Often, a deaf interpreter is not on staff to assist.

"According to section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, any federally funded agency is obliged to employ a deaf person or a deaf interpreter," said Sister Dolores.

Sister is conducting a census survey of all deaf people in Mississippi and asks that if anyone knows of a deaf person or is a deaf person to call her at 896-6161.

Sister Dolores said hopefully another sign language course will be offered at the Bay-County Library if interest develops among enough local residents. Persons interested in attending a future Ameslan course should contact Ms. Wusack at the library.

WHAT A PUNCH LINE—Sister Dolores of the de l'Epee Deaf Center in Gulfport shares a sign language joke with Charles Carver and local residents in Sister's sign language class at the Bay St. Louis-Hancock County Library. Carver, who is deaf himself, formerly worked for the Cedar Program at the de l'Epee Center, but was laid off when position was phased out. He assisted Sister Dolores with instructing her sign language class on Wednesday night. (Staff photo—Leslie Williams)

TV Christmas specials planned

The celebration of the Christmas season continues on Mississippi ETV with three special programs scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 21: "Christmas Eve on Sesame Street," "Christmas Heritage" and "Sing We Noel."

At 7 p.m., Big Bird attempts to uncover the secret of how Santa Claus gets down the chimney and how the spirit of the Christmas season comes over Sesame Street on "Christmas Eve on Sesame Street."

During the hour-long family event, Big Bird learns to ice skate during a skating party. But his happiness is not long-lived. Oscar the Grouch puts a damper on the activities when he tells Big Bird it is impossible for Santa, "who is built like a dump truck," to get down all those skinny little chimneys.

"Christmas Eve on Sesame Street" will be rebroadcast at 5 p.m., Sunday, December 24.

At 8 p.m., Thursday, December 21, "Christmas Heritage" focuses on a few of the ways that Americans have contributed to the celebration of Christmas as they have come to know it. The program takes a look at six different and highly personal interpretations of the Christmas tradition by six different writers and historians. Alistair Cooke is host.

"Christmas Heritage" will be rebroadcast at 2 p.m., Sunday, December 24.

The Mormon Youth Symphony and Chorus perform a variety of Christmas songs in Salt Lake City's Mormon Tabernacle on "Sing We Noel" at 9:30. First broadcast last Christmas, the program will be rebroadcast at 2:30 p.m., Saturday, Dec. 23. Children's illustrations and candid footage of Utah ski activities are included.

HOW WE GET OUR KICKS
Alcohol is consumed by 92 million Americans, and 65 million use tobacco, says R. Robert L. DuPont, Jr., former head of the National Institute on Drug Abuse. Dr. DuPont estimated that 43 million Americans have tried marijuana, and that 16 million are currently using it.

THE LETTER I—Students form the letter 'I' in their sign language class at the Bay St. Louis-Hancock County Library. Students, from left, Jude Blaise, deaf educator major; Fran Trombley, Bay St. Louis mayor's secretary; Joe Wusack; Prima Wusack, library director; Ann Trombley and Peggy Tedford, choral director at Bay Senior High have already completed half the course in sign language under the direction of Sister Dolores and her assistant, Charles Carver of Waveland. (Staff photo—Leslie Williams)

ALL-STAR CAST—Mark Mead, right, drama student at Saint Stanislaus High School, was named to the All-Star Cast during recent Seventh Annual High School Drama Festival at the University of South Mississippi. The Saint Stanislaus troupe received a rating of excellent for their production of Dennis E. Noble's play "A Game." Others in the cast were Marty Tighe, Grayson Lovick and Ted Schmidt. Daniel C. Griffin, left, directed the play.

'Doctor' is anything from school teacher to magician

Back in the old days a doctor was a man who doctored people—a real doctor. But now there are so many doctors of different kinds that you never know what a person means when they say doctor.

There are school teacher doctors, preachers they call doctors, doctors of law, doctors of education, doctors of philosophy, doctors of science and doctors of this, that and the other.

I once stopped to see a medicine show on the streets of New Orleans. They introduced a magician as a doctor. He looks like about most anybody is called doctor these days.

When I was a boy about the only doctor in our section who went dressed up all the time was the doctor. All the preachers I knew were dressed in plain clothes and preached on Sunday.

If anyone in the neighborhood got to going around dressed up he would be mistaken for the doctor and would pretty soon have the "know" of "Doc."

Nowadays when you hear a man called doctor you don't know what to think—don't know whether to have him feel your pulse, look at your tongue, ask him to make a speech, prepare a sermon, give a lecture on some scientific subject, figure a problem in higher mathematics or pull a rabbit out of your hat.

Back when I grew up a doctor was a man you called in case of sickness. He carried his medicine and his instruments with him in his saddle bags. He would drive up in a buggy, a two-wheel cart or on horseback.

But now the doctor travels when he goes to see you at all in a big fine car. Though he has plenty room in the car he carries no medicine with him like the old time doctor but will write up to a dozen prescriptions that you, if you live out of town, have to make an expensive trip back to town to get filled.

There is red tape in most everything these days but in nothing is there much more red tape than in getting sick. If you get a belly ache or a head ache or a back ache in these modern days you have to take a "ay or two or maybe a wee" or so and go through all the tests.

They wheel you in, they wheel you out and they wheel you round and round as long as your money or insurance lasts and then keep right on as long as the charity lasts.

I saw a fellow in the hospital not long ago being rolled down the hall. In some anxiety about this man for he is a good friend of mine, I asked his wife, who was tagging along behind, what was wrong with him. "Oh, she said, "nothing serious, he's just taking tests." First thought that struck me was to ask, "What kind of grades is he making?" But I didn't.

Now me, I like the old time kind of doctor—the personal physician that at least pretends to have a little bit of personal interest in you, who you feel is your friend as well as your doctor; who you can call on to come to your house and he'll come.

Sometime back I went to a big city hospital. That first night after my operation the doctor, in a professional way of course, came around to visit me. He walked in, very dignified, solemn and serious looking.

He didn't say a word, just glanced in my direction, but he talked to the nurse in so low a voice that I could not hear what he said. He left, if possible, even more solemn and serious looking than when he came in. I was feeling pretty bad before he came, but I was feeling worse when he left.

condition was so bad that this was the cause of his mournful, sad and grave manner. The more I thought about it the more I worried. I rang for the nurse.

When she came in I asked her to tell me the bad news, the plain truth, the whole truth about my condition. I told her that the doctor's solemn and forbidding manner had me terribly worried. She told me I was getting along alright.

That was just the doctor's professional manner. The same thing occurred next day but along about the fourth day I think the doctor must have decided I might live and he got a little friendly.

You know what this made me think of? Back when I was a boy on the farm, a horse or mule or cow would sometimes get sick. My father would go out about sundown after he came in from the fields and drench the animal, as they called it back then by tying its head up and then pouring medicine down its throat.

My father would then go back to the house, eat supper, go to bed and sleep all night, get up the next morning and go out to see if the animal was still alive. If so, he would drench it again the next night and on until it died or got better.

Yes, I like the old time kind of doctor. He may not be a specialist like the city man, but he more than makes up for this in his availability at all times, in his practical sense and in his personal interest.

There are still doctors of this old time type and I am happy to say that some of them are nearby. Their practice is a matter of service to the people as well as a matter of business.

But now at the least little thing the mother will grab the poor little child and race at high speed for the emergency room of the hospital.

Not long ago I saw a woman I know with her little boy turning into the hospital emergency entrance on two wheels.

Thinking some bad accident had happened, I inquired and found that her boy had scratched a little place on the calf of his leg, something no one would have paid any attention to when I was growing up.

The lady said she was afraid of lock jaw or blood poisoning. Back where I grew up boys got worse scratches and bruises almost every day and I never knew of a single case of lock jaw or blood poisoning in all the 19 years I lived there.

In one month twelve boys were treated at the local hospital emergency room for wasp stings. When I grew up a boy paid little attention to a wasp sting. If convenient he would put on some soda or tobacco and forget it.

There are hundreds of cases each month at the emergency room of Lucius Olen Crosby Memorial Hospital in Piquette. People have heard so much about infections that they have, I think, become overly scared.

Now if we had had such a facility available, I am sure my mother and others would have used it but I don't believe they would have taken little bitty accidents so seriously. I believe that we tend to overemphasize many simple matters in these modern times.

Back then when you had a pain in the vicinity of the stomach, the doctor told you in plain words that you had the belly ache and would have given you some simple remedy for it, while now the modern doctor will call the belly ache by all kinds of fancy names such as gastritis, appendicitis or some other itis and he will prescribe some high priced medicine you don't know the name of and which you could not pronounce if you did.

If you had a pain in the head it was just plain headache, but now they'll most probably call it some big name that does not mean a thing in the world to you or to me. When I was a boy living about 20 miles out in the country, a doctor was called only in case of serious illness.

I doubt if a doctor visited our home more than once a year on the average. We had to go on a horse about six or seven miles to get a doctor. Going that far back then on a horse was about like going 70 or 75 miles now in a fast car.

People lived to great old ages back then in spite of the fact that we had very little of the modern day medical services. One of my great grandfathers died at 95, another at 89, my father died at 95 and my mother at 91. Two great grandmothers lived to be over 90. One grandfather lived up into his seventies and the other to 87 and both grandmothers lived to ripe old ages. I hope I live as long as they did.

In the good old days the cost of being sick was very little. The medicine for a serious case of illness would cost only a dollar or so and the doctor's fee was small. When you were sick you stayed home and were cared for by your loved ones—there were no hospitals back then.

If the family could not properly care for their sick, friends and neighbors came in and helped. My grandfather was sick for several months before he died. My father and an uncle, with the help of a good old colored

Gulf Islands Park offers summer jobs

Applications for 1979 summer jobs in the National Park Service are being accepted until Jan. 15.

Special application forms and seasonal employment information are available at most National Park areas.

The competition for summer jobs will be very keen. Thousands of applications are received each year for only a few hundred seasonal positions so opportunities are extremely limited.

These positions range from labourer to uniformed park technicians. Most jobs begin in May and last through September. Applicants must be 18 years of age by the time the job begins and cannot apply for positions in more than two parks.

All applications will be sent to a special office in Denver, Colorado for screening and rating. Park superintendents will then select persons from a list of eligible candidates.

Gulf Islands National Seashore in Mississippi will be hiring three lifeguards, seven park technicians and one park aid. Applications for labourers will be handled by each Park Service office. Gulf Islands will be accepting these applications in March.

Information and applications may be obtained locally by calling the Administrative Office at (601)

MILITARY SPENDING GROWS
Over a 10-year period ending in 1978, world military spending totaled $400 billion, a 20 percent increase, accounted for largely by the industrial nations.

U.S. LOW IN VOTING
The voter turnout in national elections is quite poor in the U.S. compared with many other countries. The figure was only 54.4 percent here at home in 1978. In the most recent elections in other countries, Australia had a 95 percent turnout, West Germany 91 percent, Britain and Japan 73 percent each, and Canada 71 percent. The Swiss, with only 52 percent, appeared to be more our type.

OBITUARIES

MRS. ELLA LADNER

Mrs. Ella Ladner, 84, Rt. 2, Box 262, Pass Christian, died Thursday Dec. 7, 1978, in Memorial Hospital at Gulfport where she had been a patient for one month.

Mrs. Ladner, widow of Loren J. Ladner, was born Feb. 17, 1894 in Harrison County. She was a lifelong resident of the Ladner Community and was a member of St. William Catholic Church.

She is survived by three sons, Ora Ladner, Noel Ladner and Joseph E. Ladner; one daughter, Mrs. Nola Cuevas; four brothers, Nicholas Ladner, Xavier Ladner, Edvon Ladner and Oville Ladner, all of Pass Christian; 32 grandchildren and 42 great grandchildren.

Services were at 11 a.m. Saturday at the St. William Catholic Church with the Rev. Abram Dono, pastor, officiating.

Burial was in the St. Joseph Cemetery, Rotten Bayou. Reimann Funeral Chapel in Pass Christian was in charge of arrangements.

J.R. TATE JR.

Services for J.R. Tate Jr., 49, were conducted Friday at 3 p.m. at the Flat Top Unity Baptist Church in Picayune, with burial in New Palestine Cemetery at Picayune.

Mr. Tate, a printer and a resident of Route 3, Picayune, died Wednesday, Dec. 6, 1978. He was a member of Flat Top Unity Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Peggy Smith Tate; three sons, Ronald, Rodney and Charles Tate; a sister, Mrs. Velma Smith, all of Picayune; one grandchild; and one step-grandchild. McDonald Funeral Home in Picayune was in charge of arrangements.

Christmas decorations entries due by Dec. 19

Mrs. J. Robert Autenreith, Christmas Decorations Committee chairman, Bay-Waveland Garden Club, reports the annual community Christmas decorating contest will be judged Thursday Dec. 21.

Committee members assisting Mrs. Autenreith are Mr. and Mrs. John P. Newkirk and Ms. Edward Thomson. Judges are Mrs. Richard Cichon, Mrs. Paul Vegas, Brother Milbert Mooney, S.C., and Brother Timothy, S.C., all of whom are teachers of art, according to the contest chairman.

Judges and the committee will view area businesses and residential entries at 7 p.m. Thursday Dec. 21. All displays should be lighted at that time, she said. Ribbons and plaques will be awarded to the winners in three categories - doorway, yard, and windows - for both residential and commercial entries.

Participants are reminded that Dec. 19 is the deadline. Register by contacting Mrs. Autenreith.
